Locals walk for stolen children, land and lives

by Tony Batchelor

Disappointed by the result of the vote to parliament, Geoff Reid decided to do something to draw attention to a sad part of indigenous history.

He set out on a 'Walk 4 Stolen Children Land and Lives' from Ballina to Myall Creek, stopping at several massacre sites along the way.

His intention was to walk alone, but was soon joined by Ann and Phil Jarman, who supplied a support vehicle, and Ann decided to walk with him.

"I am participating in the 474km walk from Lismore to Myall Creek to let people know that 90% of our Indigenous population were killed by the Europeans and the Indigenous people that were left were put into missions as they were not allowed to live on their own country," Ann said.

"When on the mission, the children were stolen and many repercussions have occurred due to children being taken away.

"The walk is to make people aware of these issues, but most importantly the massacres that have occurred all around the state."

The 2026 Myall Creek massacre Memorial and Commemoration will be held over the June long weekend, Friday 5th June to Sunday 7th June.

This annual gathering honours the 28 Wirrarayay people murdered at the site in 1838 and serves as a major focus of Australian reconciliation.

Johnny Allen's Nimbin scrapbooks donated to the Aquarius Archives

by Greg Bork

At the celebration of the life of Johnny Allen at Nielsen Park in Sydney in January, his partner Warwick laid out an array of artefacts, photos and documents on the grass, including scrapbooks that Johnny meticulously compiled throughout his life.

There, Graeme Dunstan, co-organiser with Johnny of the 1973 Nimbin Aquarius Festival, saw Johnny's scrapbooks from the Aquarius era.

Most of Johnny's scrapbooks have gone to the State Library of New South Wales and the Australian Queer Archives (AQuA), but Warwick has kindly donated four of Johnny's precious scrapbooks about Nimbin to Aquarius Archives.

I am so grateful that this history remains accessible to the community that shaped it.

Johnny's care for the stories of Nimbin Aquarius was lifelong. It includes an oral history recording project at the 20th anniversary Aquarius event in 1993 for the Rainbow Archives at the State Library, and launching the Facebook group My Nimbin Aquarius Story for the 40th anniversary in 2013.

I first met Johnny in 2022 when he was in Nimbin beginning to organise the 50th anniversary in 2023 as a "landmark event", bringing all of his professional expertise from a long career in events management. Unfortunately, Covid intervened and left Johnny out of action during preparations.

He was well enough to attend Aquarius50 and organised the Aquarius Elders dinner. During organising Aquarius50, I called Johnny and he advised that we should move from a centralised program to a decentralised fringe-festival model. I'm so glad that Johnny's words are echoed in the new, upcoming Nimbin Fringe.

Johnny Allen's collections going to the State Library of NSW, Australian Queer Archives and Aquarius Archives highlights the importance of different kinds of archives and how they function.

Major institutions provide long-term preservation within state-level infrastructure. Community-run archives keep stories closely connected to the people and places that created them.

Aquarius Archives and the Australian Queer Archives are both community-run, values-driven archives that collect, preserve and share the histories of marginalised cultural movements in Australia.

They demonstrate how community-controlled archives can safeguard histories often overlooked in state collections, ensuring that alternative, activist and subcultural stories are preserved as part of Australia's broader historical record.

Themed, movement-based and community-controlled archives exist in tens rather than hundreds, and many are small, volunteer-run and missing from formal directories. They are small when compared to the tens of millions of items in national collections, but within their themes they hold some of the densest and most comprehensive bodies of material in the country.

Grassroots collections, often built through decades of unpaid labour, are essential to understanding Australia's cultural story. Unlike state-funded institutions, community archives rely heavily on donations, volunteers and project-based funding. AQUA's largest single source of funding is donations and bequests. Please consider making an end-of-financial-year tax-deductible gift to Aquarius Archives.

The simplest way to donate is to visit: aquariusarchives.org.au then click on Participate Gift, and follow the instructions to give to Nimbin Aquarius Foundation's DGR-endorsed Aquarius Archives fund. For those uncomfortable on-line, you can contact Aquarius Archives at 81 Cullen Street on Fridays from 11am to 3 pm to arrange a bank transfer or off-line gift and receive a DGR receipt.

Even modest contributions directly support the preservation of fragile materials, digitisation projects and public access initiatives. Donations help ensure that collections like Johnny Allen's scrapbooks are not only stored safely but made available for research, exhibitions and community storytelling.

They also support the volunteers and workers who catalogue, interpret and share these materials with future generations. Aquarius Archives is working hard to move from a successful start-up phase to a viable, long-term cultural community hub – a place where the Aquarius blueprint for living can grow vibrant, thriving futures.

Aquarius Archives' application to Museums & Galleries of NSW's Volunteer Placement Program has been successful. I will be headed to Sydney for two weeks of professional development at Museums of History NSW, then bring back professional skills to share with our volunteer-managed small team, including catalogue management, policy development, sustainability and strategic planning.

Aquarius Archives is a working group of Nimbin Aquarius Foundation Inc, a registered not-for-profit charitable organisation with the purpose of advancing culture. Donations are tax deductible.

Primex features technological innovations

by Sue Stock

The 42nd Norco Primex Field Day was held for the first time at the Lismore Showgrounds last month.

It was a three-day event with this year's theme 'Growing the Future' reflecting Primex's role as an economic driver. There were crowds of people visiting and the carparks were packed out.

On the day Nimbin GoodTimes visited, there were many groups of high school students eagerly checking out the displays and the stalls as well as farmers and local residents. Over 30,000 people in total visited.

There were a number of Primex hubs from agricultural machinery and tractors to ag tech solutions featuring the latest in farming technology and innovation to regenerative agriculture and sustainability, ag merchandise, trucks, paddock to plate, agritourism and health and wellbeing as well as many others.

There were also many food stalls including the most popular Country Womens Association North Coast Group of volunteers serving drinks, cakes and savoury food.

There was a great range of innovations on display including technologies for measuring and managing soil moisture, salinity and temperature and groundwater movement.

There was also a display of drones which are used for a variety of agricultural applications. Drones can be equipped with high resolution cameras, sensors and thermal imaging, and provide data collection capabilities as well as crop spraying and surveying.

Primex director, Bruce Wright said, "Primex is re-establishing and strengthening the connections and value that underpin regional and rural communities."

"The Northern Rivers provides a powerful backdrop for this, one of the most diverse and productive regions in the country."

Time to take off the rose-coloured glasses

by Bernadine Schwartz

I've met a lot of people in my time and from all walks of life, but lately I don't believe I've ever had the pleasure of meeting so many so called scientists and climatologists.

They're all coming out of the woodwork, standing on their soapboxes spreading misinformation, and with such conviction. Apparently, there's nothing to worry about!

Now it's not uncommon to have a fear of some kind, maybe a fear of heights, confined spaces, creepy crawlies, flying or a fear of deep water, yet our mortality as a species doesn't even raise an eyebrow. These charlatans are dangerous fools and they need to be silenced with some cold hard facts.

Most of society have forgotten that our survival is solely dependent on clean water, fertile soil, fresh air and favourable weather, but now all four can no longer be guaranteed.

Water abounds on Earth, but this is deceiving when only .05% of fresh water is accessible or useable, leaving very little in reserve and a report from the UN University is absolutely frightening.

The world has now entered a state of "global water bankruptcy" as water systems all around the world deplete faster than they can recover. Lakes, rivers and aquifers have passed their "tipping point" of sustainable use, and a report from the World Meteorological Organisation revealed more than 50% of the world's river catchments are under extreme stress and many are drying up.

This has left two billion people without access to safe drinking water and roughly four billion now experience a severe shortage every year for a month or so. Our very own Murray Darling Basin once fed 77,000 kilometres of waterways but today it's suffering from extreme water stress, impacting many smaller rivers that have ceased to flow or vanished.

Worldwide major rivers that once travelled freely have reached historically low levels – the Amazon, Ganges, Brahmaputra, Mekong, Mississippi, Colorado, Yangtze, Loire, Rhine, Danube, Rio Grande, Rio Bravo, Tigris and Euphrates.

That's a lot of rivers and glaciers play a crucial role feeding them, such as the Ganges and Brahmaputra that are the only source of water for hundreds of millions of people. Tens of thousands are shrinking and melting at an extraordinary pace and already hundreds have "melted out of existence", including Venezuela where not a single glacier remains.

The agricultural sector on average uses 70% of the planet's freshwater and it takes 2,000 to 5,000 litres to produce one person's daily food requirements, so envisioning a starving world isn't hard to imagine, and we're right on target.

The world's food security is now at risk, as reductions in crop yields rise and the overall nutritional value of staples drops. Crops that are a primary source of food for billions of people, such as maize, and rice and wheat, are losing their protein content and the crisis is deepening with no end in sight. Currently there are 2.8 billion people who can't afford a healthy diet and 700 million suffering from chronic malnutrition, plus 318 million whose levels of hunger have reached crisis point or worse. And not surprisingly the UN have forecast an inevitable worldwide famine within the next 30 years.

Dirt isn't just dirt; it's a highly prized commodity and why? It takes roughly a thousand years to form three centimetres of topsoil, yet we're using it ten to forty times faster than it can be replenished and industrial agriculture is to blame for the loss of 40%. If current erosion rates continue, industrial experts from the UN Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO), have warned that the world's topsoil could disappear in sixty years.

Every day we're totally unaware that the air we breathe in and out is now the greatest environmental threat to human health. According to the World Health Organisation, 99% of the world's population are breathing in air that exceeds air quality guidelines and less than 1% of the planet's land area has air quality that meets international standards.

Today, nine out of ten deaths in low to middle income nations are attributed to outdoor air pollution, and how disturbing to think this includes 2,000 innocent young children who die every day.

The weather determines nearly everything we do, and those good old-fashioned seasons really have become a thing of the past. They're gone! What more is there to say? I'm completely off the grid, and for the first time in nearly 17 years I have no power and still waiting for the sun to return, but it's not looking good.

That expression "It's not the end of the world" just doesn't ring true, it's now a probability and it took a mighty effort on our part to sweep an entire planet under the carpet, and somehow, we managed to not trip over it. Now there's no avoiding it.

All those thoughtless actions that were considered inconsequential, created a butterfly effect, and even when society were warned time after time, they continued on regardless. We say we love our children but not enough, apparently.

What springs to mind? Global warming, the modern-day Pied Piper of Hamelin and there'll be no negotiating. Nature's on a course of destruction, and now our children get to pay the price!

Flotilla prevented from delivering life-saving aid to Gaza

by Julie De Lorenzo

“When governments fail, we set sail” is the mantra of the Global Sumud Flotilla, which may as well also read: “When we set sail, governments fail.”

Under International Humanitarian Law the Australian Government are committed to “allowing and facilitating full, safe, rapid and unhindered humanitarian access for the delivery of humanitarian assistance in accordance with relevant international law.” (Declaration for the protection of humanitarian personnel’, Dept of Foreign Affairs & Trade.)

Despite this, Australian activists were warned by the Australian Government not to join the mission to Gaza and to send aid through established channels. That would be all well and good if the aid was guaranteed to arrive. Sadly, aid is still being blocked by Zionists.

Still, with no support from the government, Sumud (meaning ‘steadfast’ in Arabic) courage and selflessness is what this group of doctors, artists, lawyers, social workers – ordinary Australians – brought with them on this humanitarian mission.

For the two and a half years that the Genocide in Gaza has flooded our screens through social media and accessible through YouTube videos and independent news channels, our government has failed to condemn the actions of the IDF directed by the genocidal state of Israel.

Not only did they fail to condemn the slaughter of over 72,000 human lives – more than a quarter of those were babies and children – they remain complicit by providing parts for fighter jets to Israel and very possibly providing US intelligence facilities at Pine Gap, Northern Territory.

You may not need to be reminded that sadly, Gaza is now home to the highest number of child amputees. In case you’re wondering, just because Israel’s right-hand man took centre stage by starting a war in Iran, doesn’t mean the genocide in Gaza has stopped.

Although a ceasefire was announced last October, the killing, destruction and stealing of land, homes and lives continues not only in Gaza but also in the occupied West Bank where settlers enjoy full support of police, IOF and the state, while they persistently harass, attack, steal and destroy land, people and animals.

Killing Palestinians is occurring together by settlers, Israeli military and police forces.

The genocide is ongoing and has expanded into Lebanon and Iran with more than six million currently displaced as a result of Israel’s deadly campaign.

Just this week The UN concluded that Israel has committed ‘serious violations of international humanitarian law’ and called for Israel to “end its unlawful presence in the Palestinian territory.”

Many people are simply unable to sit back and watch the horror while genocidal psychopaths continue to commit unspeakable acts of violence. The Global Sumud Flotilla is one such group of ordinary people from around the globe doing extraordinary things.

Committed to breaking the illegal siege on Gaza by bringing food, medicine, clean water, baby formula and prosthetic limbs to Gaza, 428 activists across 50 civilian boats from 45 countries set sail.

This week, 11 Australians were among all who were illegally abducted from international waters and imprisoned for three days in Israeli gulags.

They were subjected to sexual assault, torture, tasered, forced to kneel with zip-tied hands behind their backs in stress positions. Some activists were hospitalised with broken bones and other injuries after being kicked, beaten and shot at with rubber bullets, and forensic examinations are underway.

Any one of these volunteers will tell you that this treatment is nothing compared to what the 10,000+ Palestinian prisoners suffer daily, who are also now subject to a law that was recently passed for Palestinians to be executed by hanging. Many of these prisoners are held without charge or trial.

While visiting a makeshift prison at the port in Ashdod, Israel’s National Security Minister Itamar Ben Gvir posted a video of himself on social media taunting the detained activists and relishing in their suffering.

Who responded? Italy, France, the Netherlands, Canada. Following suit, Penny Wong eventually made a statement of condemnation of Ben Gvir’s arrogant and cruel behaviour and called for the release of the activists.

She did not condemn Israel for preventing lifesaving aid from reaching Gaza and there are still no sanctions on Israel.

Call Penny Wong, Minister for Foreign Affairs (it’s her job): 02 6277-7500, or email: senatorwong@aph.gov.au Demand that the Australian Government cut ties with Israel, obey international law and stop sending parts for weapons, cancel all alliance with Israel and refuse to host Israeli diplomats.

The Jewish Council of Australia has said that Australia should go further than sanctioning Ben Gvir, and expel Israel’s Ambassador.

You may ask... ‘What else can I do?’

- Visit in person (bring your friends along), email and/or call your State MP Janelle Saffin (Lismore Electorate) and Federal MP Kevin Hogan and demand that they condemn the actions of Israel and move to sanction Israel immediately.
- Join the Global Sumud Flotilla. There are many roles to be filled behind the scenes as well as sailing to Gaza.
- Download the NoThanksApp – Boycott Israeli products and affiliated companies.
- Visit bdsaustralia.net.au on how to boycott, divest and sanction Israel.
- Join Northern Rivers Friends of Palestine (on Facebook and Instagram), support the disruption of the arms supply chain, attend/support fundraiser events.
- Join APAN (Australian Palestine Advocacy Network)

Thankfully, the Australian activists who were abducted have returned home from the Flotilla.

Chamber Chat

by David Hyett, president

There is a fair bit moving around Nimbin at the moment. Some of it is visible from the street, some of it is happening in meeting rooms, inboxes and grant applications, and some of it is the quiet work of keeping community connections alive.

A few local businesses are changing shape or finding new homes. Nimbin Pizza Cucina has opened in town, The Beauty Room is now offering personal care and beauty treatments at the back of Birth & Beyond, Fashionating is preparing to move premises to the Church of Aquarius, and the former Krishna restaurant has changed hands and is now offering roadhouse-style food. The village also now has a dreadlock maintenance service.

Nimbin in motion

These shifts are part of the living pulse of the village. Shops open, move, adapt and reinvent themselves, and each one adds another thread, or in this case a dread, to the local business fabric.

Council and infrastructure matters are also high on the Chamber radar. Matt Potter, Lismore City Council’s Director of Water, is expected to attend an upcoming Chamber meeting to discuss the Nimbin water upgrade.

With recent boil water alerts and on-going community interest in water quality, treatment capacity and future infrastructure, this will be an important opportunity for local businesses and residents to hear more directly from Council and ask practical questions.

The Chamber has also provided written support for Council’s application to the Active Regional Community Participation Grant, with the proposal focused mainly on Peace Park and the children’s play area.

The grant stream is worth up to $1 million, with the broader project value currently understood to be around $1.2 million. The proposed improvements are aimed at recreation, accessibility and community infrastructure, with benefits for residents, young people and visitors.

Peace Park sits close to the heart of village life, and any investment in safe, welcoming public space is an investment in the everyday life of Nimbin.

Transport is another item worth watching. Rainbow Power Company has put forward a proposal for a twice-daily Nimbin to Byron Bay bus service, aimed at boosting tourism and improving access to training opportunities through Wollongbar TAFE.

The proposal is seeking potential Chamber support, either through a financial contribution or by helping promote advertising opportunities to local businesses. It is early days, but the idea touches several important issues at once: visitor access, education, employment pathways and regional connection.

The upcoming School Market and Youth Focus Volunteer Expo on 26 June at Nimbin Central School is another strong opportunity to connect young people with local organisations, businesses and community groups.

Local groups are encouraged to get involved, whether by hosting a stall, offering a simple activity, or outlining volunteer and work experience opportunities.

Not every young person finds their pathway through a straight road. Sometimes it begins with a conversation at a stall, a few hours helping out, or discovering that the town they live in has more possibilities than they realised.

Village presentation and public art remain active topics. The Chamber’s mural collection tins are being prepared with artwork kindly provided by Benny Zable, one of the artists whose work has formed part of Nimbin’s mural history.

The Haberdashery mural expression of interest did not receive artist interest this round, so the Chamber will need to consider the next steps. Nimbin’s murals are more than decoration. They are part of the village memory, part wayfinding, part welcome mat, part wild public diary.

The Chamber also noted the importance of continuing feedback from the recent Awards Night, including possible improvements such as a People’s Choice Award or other categories in future. Community recognition matters because so much of Nimbin’s working life rests on volunteers, small organisations and people doing the unseen jobs that keep the village functioning.

There are also ongoing local matters to keep an eye on, including issues involving the Caravan Park and Council, and changes affecting Jungle Patrol following the loss of a couple of staff members.

These will need a little more detail before they can be properly reported, but they both sit within the broader question of how Nimbin manages services, public space, safety, tourism and Council relationships.

As always, Chamber Chat is not just a list of meeting items. It is a snapshot of a village constantly adjusting its sails: businesses opening and moving, young people being invited in, Council conversations continuing, and local people finding practical ways to look after the place.

Choose local. Experience Nimbin.

Nimbin water supply issues by the Nimbin Water Collective

Through our work over the past several months, we have learned that the Nimbin water supply is under review by the Lismore City Council (LCC).

The Council is seeking to determine the sustainability of our local traditional supply plus looking at options as to what might also be a future pathway for water security for Nimbin.

Thus far, the Terms of Reference for the Options Assessment have been inaccessible to the public, therefore giving rise to the possibility that community-based initiatives could have been overlooked.

So in good faith, we have written to LCC with concerns that they may be proceeding with the Nimbin Water Supply Options Assessment without the full recommendations of the community having been included in the assessment.

Our objective was to ensure that Council was considering options that ensured that Nimbin retains its independent and vital water source, with the possibility of enhancing the system with better management strategies as outlined in NGT April article.

We have written to the Council to ensure that all these objectives are part of the Nimbin Water Supply Options Assessment that we understood to be scheduled for release to the public in June.

We have now received this response:

“At this stage, the scope of the assessment does not include detailed field investigations, detailed design of specific options, or community consultation and engagement. Council will review the outcome of the assessment before determining the next steps, including the nature and extent of future consultation.”

“Council notes the additional matters raised in your correspondence, including catchment management, water recycling and reuse, increased storage capacity, and demand management measures.”

“These considerations are broadly aligned with the scope of this assessment, particularly in relation to demand management, water storage and environmental impact, and are considered at an appropriate level within the option assessment. Environmental flow requirements are also considered in the assessment of any options involving increased extraction from, or modification of, the existing weir.”

“Catchment rehabilitation is not assessed in detail within this phase of the study. Recycled water has not been included as a supply option in the current assessment scenarios. Community acceptability has not been directly assessed through consultation within this phase of the project.”

“It is recognised that differing community views are likely to exist across potential supply options, and formal community consultation will be required in future stages to inform and confirm the preferred option.”

While this position may suit decision-making processes for LCC, it does not include the Nimbin community, except it would appear to ratify the decision once they’ve already made up their minds.

This attitude lacks credible consultation and the authenticity of a whole and true analysis.

Currently, as indicated in the letter from LCC the options listed are:

- Bulk water supply from the Rous County Council;
- Augmentation of the current surface water supply;
- Groundwater supply. As a groundwater-dependent ecosystem, it is imperative that we here in Nimbin are able to manage our water use without disrupting the stability and vitality of the artesian systems.

This applies both in our immediate vicinity and across the Northern Rivers. It is all interconnected. Its hydrological processes are yet to be fully understood.

What impacts of groundwater extraction from the Clarence-Moreton Basin at the Alstonville Plateau are yet to be realised?

“Groundwater quality and quantity monitoring data availability varies considerably across different aquifers of the Clarence-Moreton Bioregion.”

“While alluvial aquifers such as the Lockyer valley alluvium have a considerable number of monitoring bores, most deep bedrock aquifers are only monitored by a few bores in the entire basin.”

“One of the key challenges for the Clarence-Moreton Bioregional Assessment will be to deal with this scarcity of data across deep rock formations and provide recommendations as to what data (and where) will be required for future assessments.” (Hydrology and groundwater quality, www.bioregionalassessments.gov.au/assessment 2018).

We will also continue to seek understanding of the implications of the current ‘Boil Water Alert’ which we are informed is attributed to increased turbidity following periods of high rainfall.

Please contact the Nimbin Water Collective at: nimbinenvironmentcentre@gmail.com and add what you can to our knowledge base and observations, energy and expertise – scientists, students, natural wonderers and environmental protectors.

CWA state conference votes to support koala park

Nimbin CWA doing by Sue Stock

The CWA is definitely more than just freshly-made scones, strawberry jam and whipped cream.

Every year the NSW State conference is held with members voting on motions on a wide variety of issues including health care access, women’s homelessness, agricultural safety, telecommunications, transport, energy policy and environmental protection that the State CWA will advocate for.

This year, Nimbin branch was represented by Ashoka Joblin and Bev Gardner, and they put forward a successful motion regarding Richmond River Koala Parks:

“That the policy of the CWA of NSW shall be to advocate for the establishment of the Richmond River Koala Parks reserve, which includes State Public Native Forests in the Richmond Valley and southern Richmond Range, to ensure that vulnerable and endangered native flora and fauna have safe haven, to replenish their populations.”

This was argued by Ashoka and approved by the delegates from all over NSW.

Assisting citizen scientists

Nimbin CWA has also recently donated monies for the purchase of a number of powerful spotlights capable of picking up the eye shine of animals in the forest at night.

Citizen scientists have been out in Ewingar State Forest near Tabulam where they located 33 greater glider dens where Forestry NSW were only able to find two. An identified den means a 50-metre protection zone must be made safe from logging, and excludes logging entirely.

See the article by Kendall Nesci, NGT May edition p25 for more details. If you are interested in joining the citizen scientists contact the Environment Centre for details.

Meet our members

Every month or so, we’ll hear from one of our members about their CWA journey. This time we’ll meet Ashoka Joblin.

Where do you live? I live in Nimbin about five kms from the village on the edge of the Nightcap.

Why did you decide to join? When the Ashoka Joblin in the forest

Nimbin branch restarted, I had just retired and was looking for some volunteer work.

Then the bushfires happened and I was so impressed with what the group was doing, cooking meals and helping the community, I decided to join.

What do you enjoy most about your membership? Working with a good bunch of women who get a lot done and give a lot back to the community.

When are we open?

Nimbin CWA rooms are open on Wednesdays from 10am ‘til 4pm. Our cooks provide healthy lunches for only $5 as well as cakes including gluten-free. The op shop is also open with many great bargains to be found.

We are also open on Nimbin market days and have espresso coffee and (yes) scones with jam and cream available for purchase.

The Nimbin CWA rooms are in the Community Centre grounds, next to the firehouse on Sibley Street.

Branch Meetings are held at 3pm on the 2nd Monday of the month, and new members are always welcome.

For all general enquiries please phone 0457-363-925 or email: secretary.cwa.nimbin@gmail.com
